

The quality of closed captioning seems to be improving steadily, particularly with news-type commentary shows. However, in my experience there are some cable channels that consistently fail to caption films, notably FX and Oxygen. I've also noticed that occasionally MTV fails to caption some first-run shows, though when the shows are repeated later, the captions have usually been added.